
Largest pulp mill company, Suzano, attracts billions despite massive land grabbing

DW news portal investigated ongoing socio-environmental conflicts in Brazil related to Suzano, which manages over a million hectares of eucalyptus plantations across the country and plans to almost double that in the next decade. They expose that the company is facing 262 possible and probable civil and environmental proceedings, and 2,449 probable and possible labour proceedings. Despite this terrible record, the company has attracted billions in 'green' investments. Read further in English here.
